Lots of religions encourage their followers to give up things for God. Look at these examples, then write three things you would find difficult to give up.

Most adult Muslims fast during daylight hours for the month of Ramadan.

Christians often give up things for lent. Some Christians do not eat meat on Fridays or on Ash Wednesday.

Some Buddhists fast when they meditate.

Some Hindus fast on the eleventh day of every month. They do not eat from sunrise, until the following sunrise.

Some Buddhists, Sikhs and Hindus do not eat meat or fish.

Jews and Muslims do not eat pork.

Some Jews fast on special religious days like the 'Day of Atonement'.
